LAST ASSAULT.

Japs Are Having More Tronble Than Expected.

Russians Are Hopeful of Holding Out Indefinitely—Cruisers Safe.

Che Foo, Aug. 22.—The latest reports received at Che Foo indicate that the Japanese attack on Port Arthur has not been successful, but that fighting is still in progress. The Japanese are making what they call the final assault all along the line and claim that the city will be in their possession in a few days. The Japanese have occupied Anshanban, driving a part of the Russian forces toward Wokden, but the heavy rains are still interfering with the Manchurian campaign. It is reported that the Russian war vessels Novik and Diana, missing since the Port Arthur fight of August 10, have landed safely in Russian ports. Russia has called out large forces of reserves to be sent to the scene of war.

Sunday's Developments.
Russia's refusal to observe the laws of neutrality has brought about a strained situation at Shanghai. The cruiser Askold and a smaller vessel are still there, despite China's orders to leave, and yesterday a Japanese torpedo boat entered the harbor. Before she could reach the Askold, which is in dock, the United States torpedo boat destroyer Chancey placed herself between the two warships, preventing any attempt at hostilities. A fleet of Japanese war vessels is outside the harbor. The Taotai of Shanghai has declared he cannot protect the foreign interests because of Russia's action and has called upon Russia's Consul General Goodnow to aid him. The Russian cruiser Novik, which has displayed such wonderful activity, was defeated and stranded yesterday by two Japanese cruisers. The Japanese are said to have captured the northernmost fort of the inner line of the Russian defenses at Port Arthur.

HAD TO HURRY

But He Got Off The Track in Time.

Ed Forbes, of Larkin had a narrow escape at the L. & N. depot Saturday afternoon. He was crossing the railroad with an express wagon loaded with groceries and seeing the train close at hand, he whipped up his horse with such speed that the wagon was turned over after it cleared the track. Forbes was caught under the load and seriously bruised. He sustained a severe gash on his forehead which a physician had to sew up.

JOHN BOYD

Purchases Farm of Esq. S. G. Buckner, South of Town.

Jailer John Boyd has bought Mr. S. G. Buckner's farm on the Beverly pike, a very desirable little farm a few miles from town. The price was about $6,000. Mr. Boyd will move to it at the expiration of his official term.

None Too Soon.

Mr. Walter Knight and his two sisters have returned from St. Louis. They narrowly escaped being in the path of the balloon-shaped cyclone of Friday. They were on a street car and the motor man increased his speed and passed out of the danger just ahead of the storm, which a moment more crossed the track behind them.

Patient Dead.

Miss Sallie Ferguson, a patient from Graves county, died Sunday at the Asylum. The remains were shipped to Mayfield yesterday.

RELIC OF WAR.

Historic Weapon Restored to Daughter of Gen. Ross.

A Confederate Officer Who Was Killed While a Prisoner and Attempting to Escape.

Mrs. Joseph Killbrew, of Montgomery county, Tenn., was in Hopkinsville a few days ago on an errand that calls up memories of more than 41 years ago. She came to receive from Judge W. P. Winfree a sabre that was the property of her father, Brig. Gen. Reuben Ross, who was killed in this county in 1862 or 1863.

Ross was a colonel in the Confederate army and while temporarily detached from his command was in and around Hopkinsville. While here he received his commission as Brigadier General and it was found in his pocket when he was mortally wounded two weeks later. The night before this happened he attended a party in Hopkinsville and escorted Miss Bradshaw, now Mrs. W. P. Winfree, to the party. The next day he went into North Christian. That country was filled with Unionists, and some of them informed two farloughed Union soldiers of his presence in the neighborhood. One of these soldiers now lives in this city. They came upon him unexpectedly and captured him. After disarming him, they made preparations to take him to federal headquarters as a prisoner. While they were in the act of mounting horses for the trip, Ross suddenly grabbed one of his captors and while attempting to snatch a pistol from his belt, the other soldier brained him with the butt of his gun. In a desperate condition Ross was brought to town and taken to Mrs. Wain's residence, where he received surgical attention, but his skull was crushed and he died a few days later from the blow.

The sabre he wore was taken care of by Miss Bradshaw, who being related to him, called at his boarding house. After the war closed she became the wife of Judge Winfree, a Confederate soldier and comrade of the dead man, and they have carefully preserved the sabre for more than 40 years.

Mrs. Killbrew is a daughter of Gen. Ross, whose home is in Montgomery county, Tenn. Judge Winfree not long ago met her and told her of the weapon and invited her to come over and make his family a visit and get it. This she has done.

Gen. Ross was a grandson of the noted preacher of the same name. He is well remembered by many of our older citizens. He was a gallant soldier, noted for his reckless bravery and desperate disregard of danger. Once before he was taken a prisoner and while on the way to a federal prison jumped from a train moving at full speed and escaped with such slight injuries that he rejoined his regiment not long afterwards. At the time he received his death wound, he forced his captors to act on the defensive to save their own lives. The death he had so often courted came to him from his own recklessness.

HEAVY MORTGAGE

Placed On Henderson's New Play House.

James E. English, of Paducah, who has been talking of building an opera house here, has mortgaged the English Theatre at Henderson. The following special appeared in Sunday's paper:

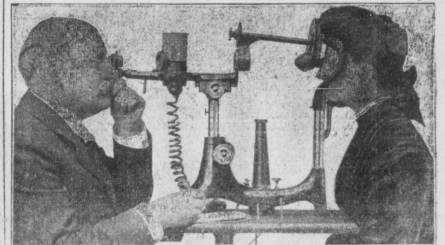

Henderson, Ky., Aug. 20.—The English Theatre Company filed a mortgage deed of trust today for $15,000 to trustee Charles E. Dablam. This mortgage is to secure the issuance of 6 per cent. gold bonds for the above amount to run for twenty years. The property pledged in this mortgage is the English Theatre property in this city.

OLD PHONES

Are Being Listed as New Ones, Says Mr. Hoge.

Manager Hoge, of the Home Telephone Co., says complaints have come to his office that several of his subscribers have had their directors abstracted.

He says an agent of the Cumberland told him that a great objection to the automatic service was that no call could be made in the absence of a directory, whereas a Cumberland subscriber could request central to connect by name. Mr. Hoge says it is proper to warn his subscribers to watch their directories, but if any subscriber's book has disappeared he will supply another. Call 1111 or 1444. He further says the list of 32 alleged new subscribers published by the Cumberland as having been put on since Aug. 1, contains the names of at least 8 who were on the directory issued several months ago. Others are outside of town and several are duplicated.

The Home Company has put in 27 more new ones since August 1 and others will be put in as soon as they can be reached by the workmen.

Substitute Carrier.

Fred Cae is the popular and gentlemanly carrier on the South Main street route is taking Wm. Knight, a color-filling his place.

BULLETS WHISTLED

As the Preacher Left Rich Redd's House.

A colored bartender named Rich Redd, when he returned home Saturday night, it is said, found a colored preacher named Jones in a room with his wife under circumstances that convinced him that the minister was not making a pastoral call. Redd opened fire as the preacher leaped from a window and fled with such precipitancy that a barbed-wire fence proved to be only a temporary obstacle. The preacher sustained some scratches, either from flying bullets or barbed wires, he doesn't know which.

EDWARDS-CARTER.

Young Couple of Bennettsstown Wedded Last Week.

Mr. Charles M. Edwards and Miss Ollie Carter, daughter of Mrs. Osborne, both of Bennettsstown, were married a few nights ago, by the Rev. Israel Janner, at his residence near Lafayette.

Nashville Man Hurt.

Madisonville, Ky., Aug. 19.—E. S. Weddell, claiming Nashville, Tenn., as his home, was struck by a south-bound train last night two miles north of this city. His left arm was mangled and his hip dislocated. He was sent home to-day.

Two hundred feet in length and almost half as much in width, the elevator rose a hundred and fifty feet in the air. Through two large doors in the ends ran railroad tracks, leading through the base of the building. Near the wooden one-story office, snugly close to its immense neighbor, a dizzy ladder of steel rods, riveted to the side of the elevator, led straight up to the roof.

To the north stretched the business portion of the city; to the south the glittering harbor unrolled its broad expanse. Hundreds of cars stood in the adjoining freight yard; and at the docks below three long, black ocean liners, with funnels banded red and white, stood drowsily through their steam-pipes, while into their yawning holds the grain was poured by exhaustless spouts.

Archie Braithwait was a student at a business college in the city. His spare time was largely spent in getting an idea of the different industries of the place.

On Wednesday and Saturday afternoons he had recitations, and to these half-days he looked forward with much pleasure. He had already visited the electric light plants, the potteries, a shoe factory and the rolling mills.

The elevator came next on his schedule. Every morning when he went down to his work, he saw across a half-mile of lower roofs the colossal structure against the eastern sky.

Suggestive of great transactions it fascinated the young man, and it was with considerable satisfaction that at last, one Saturday afternoon, he found himself in the shadow of the building with a pass from his superintendent, giving him the freedom of the plant.

Before entering the elevator he stood for a few minutes, taking in the details outside. The huge steel ships, stretching their ponderous length so peacefully in the muddy docks; the high, sharp-booms, with their columns of white draft marks; the sailors swung on dangling stages, painting the iron sides; the shouts of the stevedores—all combined to make the scene fascinating.

But time was passing. Braithwait turned reluctantly from the wharves, and passing through the endless flocks of pigeons and English sparrows, plump from feasting on the spilled kernels, entered the door of the elevator.

The next two hours were of absorbing interest. He explored the place from top to bottom, until he understood what was done to the grain from the time it was taken from the cars until it was loaded on the steamers.

Few men were in sight, and no one asked him for his pass. Every body was too busy to be curious, and apparently took it for granted that any stranger in the building had good reason for being there.

It was a cold building. Sudden drafts swooped down from unexpected quarters. The air was filled with fine powder, which strewed the floors. Dusty electric bulbs lighted the semi-darkness. Speaking tubes ran here and there.

There was a sound of rushing grain; the floors shook with the rumble of machinery. By pressing a button or pulling a lever all the gigantic processes could be modified or checked.

In the course of his explorations Braithwait came to the "spout-door," pierced with numerous large round holes. Here great movable spouts of iron conveyed the grain from the garner above into the bins beneath these holes, which were fitted with hinged iron covers. Some of the covers were thrown entirely back; others, lifted to an angle of more than 90 degrees, were held up by sticks. The student moved gingerly among them, for he had no inclination to test the depth of the black-on-tops. Far down the long, dusty room, more than 150 feet distant, two men were busy shifting the spouts; but they paid no attention to him.

At the very end of the floor was an opening with stick-propped cover, and peering on the boards beside it, in a dark, dust-covered figure, its yawned.

Braithwait stepped into it. The bin was full of grain. He saw the grain steeped down to peer within. Utter darkness met his gaze. How it happened he cannot tell to this day, but as he rose again his foot slid along the slippery floor, and he shot downward into the pit.

As he passed through the opening he made an ineffectual grasp at its edge, but instead struck the stick that held the cover up. Down it came, and while he still hung suspended in mid-air all light from above was blotted out, and he was left in total darkness.

The terrible sensation of falling that unknown distance will never forget. How for benefited him was the grain? It might be him, twenty, thirty, forty feet. Perhaps the bin contained no grain at all, in which event he would fall sixty feet before his bones were shattered on the hard timbers. These ideas passed like lightning through his brain. Then with a shock the motion ceased. He had fallen head first, but turned a half-somersault on his way down, alighting up to his knees in a yielding substance that broke the shock of his fall. He found afterward that the distance could not have been more than twenty feet, but the total strangeness of the place, and the total uncertainty as to when and where he would bring up made it seem three times as great.

Braithwait's first feeling was one of thankfulness that none of his bones were broken. With his thumb and forefinger he tried the substance into which he had fallen. The kernels were small and elliptical, and he knew that he was in a bin of wheat. It was absolutely dark; not the faintest glimmer from any source relieved the Egyptian darkness. The air was dry and free from dust, and the odor of the grain was not unpleasant. The young man did not realize at first that he was in a position of any peril. He felt annoyed and angry with himself for being so careless. But it was useless to stand idle, blaming himself for something that had passed. The thing was to get back to the floor, but how?

Might there not be a ladder on the side of the bin? Braithwait felt his way round the walls, but discovered none. The investigating showed him that his prison was square, with a side of about fifteen feet. He could feel the timbers quiver with the vibration from the machinery. Deadened sounds came to him from without. He heard the muffled whistle of a locomotive in the adjoining freight-yard. Could he make noise enough to attract the attention of the workers on the floor above?

For two or three minutes he shouted at the top of his lungs, filling the bin with clamorous echoes, but the closed trap kept the men from hearing him. Then with sickening force came a sense of his peril that left him weak and faint. What if they should begin to draw off the wheat before he could get out? He would surely be smothered in the sinking mass.

The thought roused him like a knife-stab. Round and round the bin he hurried, slumping deep in the grain with every step, feeling in vain along the smooth walls for something to which he might cling. With clenched fists he hammered on the wood, hoping that some one would hear the sound and understand his danger. But his blows, reverberated by the reverberation of the machinery, were no more audible outside than the steps of a fly on a window pane.

Terror seized him. He felt himself in the grasp of an automatic monster. To that heartless mechanism he was no more than one of the innumerable grains which it was its function to store and deliver at the bidding of its masters.

He was standing near the middle of the bin when the thing he dreaded happened. Beneath his feet came a shifting, sliding motion, and the surface sank a little, just the slightest bit; but he could not have been more appalled had the solid ground been suddenly torn from under him. They were drawing off the wheat through the opening at the bottom! Before he knew it, he had sunk above his ankles. He leaped away from the treacherous center, and crowded himself back into one of the corners.

Whenever a compartment filled with small particles is emptied through an orifice below, the substance falls from the top; down through the entire mass and directly above the aperture sinks a core, which is constantly fed at the summit by particles from the sides sliding into the cavity.

If one has ever watched in an hour-glass some grain larger than the others lunging for a time on the edge of the vortex until the supporting grains fall away from under it and it rolls down the slope to disappear in the central quicksand, one will understand the peril that threatened Braithwait. Once let him be dragged within the influence of the suction, and nothing could save him from being buried alive in the smothering grain.

The student never thought hard or faster than he did during the next few seconds. All was quiet in the bin save for the soft sliding of the myriad kernels toward the invisible depression in the center. He realized clearly the only course which held out the least hope of safety. Throwing off his overcoat he tossed it aside in the blackness. Then with hands and feet he began to scoop the grain away from his corner and push it toward the center. The cavity thus made gave him a brief respite, until the sinking of its wall set him to digging desperately again.

Thus he fought and struggled in the blackness, until utter fatigue overcame him. His muscles ached almost to numbness. His breath came short. He was drenched with perspiration. But there was no cessation in the movement of the grain. Slowly it gained upon him as he made his losing fight. The horror of the death that impended goaded him to extreme efforts, but his diminished strength could not cope with the steady sinking of the wheat. Oh, if they would only close the spout below!

The catastrophe, long averted, came at last. The edge crumbled beneath his feet; he slipped, staggered, fell! Down the steep slope he rolled, madly trying to check his progress by thrusting his arms and legs into the yielding mass; but to no avail. His hands grasped only the sliding kernels.

In a moment he was above the central vortex. Wild with terror, he put forth the most desperate efforts to climb the sides of the pit. Again and again he seemed to be in a fair way to regain the top; but each time, after he had crept up a little distance, the grain would slip beneath him, carrying him back to the bottom. The moment came at last when he could not free his ankles from the clutch of the gulf. Down he sank in the quagmire, lower—lower—lower! A resistless power beneath seemed to be grasping his feet in a clutch that neither increased nor loosened. There was something terrible about its sameness.

Now the grain reached his knees, now it was half-way up his thighs, now he was buried to the waist. Higher and higher it crept, until it was close under his armpits. In a very short time it would be over his head, and he would die horribly under the choking kernels.

But help came to Braithwait just as all hope was leaving him. Heavy steps shuffled along the floor overhead. The sinking man realized that it was his last opportunity, and cry after cry burst from his lips.

His shouts were heard. The steps halted for a moment, then the cover above was flung suddenly back, admitting the first light that had reached the prisoner's eyes since he had fallen through the opening and the trap had changed shut. A red face, with bristling dusty-white mustache, peered into the blackness of the bin.

The wheat was sliding over Braithwait's shoulders as he uttered one last hoarse, inarticulate cry. The man above could see nothing, but he understood; and his quick understanding was the sinking student's salvation.

Braithwait heard him run along the floor to a speaking-tube, and guessed that the order to stop the flow of wheat was being given. Then all at once the motion beneath his feet ceased, and he knew that he was saved.

A rope ladder was lowered into the bin, and two men, with lanterns and shovels, soon released the student from what had almost been a living tomb. It was half an hour before his strength came back enough to allow him to climb to the floor above; and to this day he never sees an elevator without recalling his fight for life in bin 77.

Pain in Chest Sore Lungs Grip

How easy it is to catch cold! How quickly it settles on the lungs, and how easily it results in Grip, Pneumonia and Consumption! Many deaths are caused in the beginning by a slight cold.

Hamlin's WIZARD OIL

will break up a cold on the lungs in a night. If should be applied when the first symptoms appear. Rub the chest well with the medicine, by means of a linen cloth wet with Hamlin's Wizard Oil and cover over with flannel bandage. No ordinary cold can withstand this treatment. Apply it night just before retiring and in the morning the cold will be broken up.

Richard W. Thornton, Oquir, Cal., writes, April 25, 1902: "My little girl, and two years, has suffered with cold since her birth and finally the trouble became serious. We tried remedies of several kinds and they seemed to give no relief. A friend of mine recommended Hamlin's Wizard Oil and after the use of one bottle she has become entirely well. I shall never be without Hamlin's Wizard Oil in my house. I cannot recommend it too highly."

TWO BURNED.

Georgia Community Making War On Negroes.

Lynch Law Runs Rampant And Terror Reigns at Statesboro.

Statesboro, Ga., Aug. 17.—With clothing saturated with kerosene, writhing and twisting in their agony, screaming to heaven for mercy that the mob would not stop, Paul Reed and Will Cato, negroes, two of the principals in the dastardly murder and burning of Henry Hodges and wife and three of their children, six miles from Statesboro, three weeks ago, were burned at the stake yesterday.

At 1.21 o'clock a determined mob, charged upon the court house, overpowered the military guard, secured Cato and Reed, who had been found guilty after a legal trial, and sentenced to be hanged, took them two miles from Statesboro and there executed the fearful penalty.

Just as the match was applied to the pyre of those in front awaiting death he did not want to tell the truth before he died.

"Yes sir. I killed Mr. and Mrs. Hodges."

"Who killed the children?" he was asked.

"Handy Bell," came the response as the flames leaped upward, and further questioning was impossible for the wild tumult. As the flames leaped about Reed's naked body, with oil-soaked skin, he twisted his head around in an endeavor to choke himself and escape the fearful torture. Only once did he complain. He said: "Lord have mercy."

Cato screamed in agony, and begged to be shot. His heavy hair which was oilsoaked, was almost the first thing the flames fastened on, and screaming with agony while the hemp rope became a collar of fire around his neck, a thrill of horror ran through the frames of the more timid. Before the flames had quenched Cato's life the rope was burned into and his head swung from side to side as he endeavored to avoid the fiery tongues.

Others Shot to Death.

Handy Bell, who was discharged from jail yesterday on account of lack of evidence, was shot to death last night. When he was released from custody he left the city, going in a direction opposite from his home. He was followed by fifteen armed men, who kept him in sight until he was well into the country, where they overtook him and riddled him with bullets. One negro was found dead by the roadside five miles east of the town, his body pierced by two Winchester bullets; two negroes, one of the "old-time darkies" and his seventeen-year-old son, shot in their cabin during the late hours of last night by unknown marauders; half a dozen cases of flogging, which are of nightly occurrence, too frequent to excite more than passing notice—such was the history of the day.

Miss Stockton's Success.

The following notice of Miss May Stockton, a niece of Mrs. J. B. Taylor, of this city, is from the Traverse City, Michigan, Record. Miss Stockton visited her aunt here last year.

"A Texas Steer" pleased a large house at Steinberg's Grand last evening. Chas. Host's inimitable satire requires a very capable company to interpret it and the company last evening was much above the average. The play is a laugh from beginning to end, but it is a faithful satire on the possibilities of American politics. Miss May Stockton as Bossy, Brader's pet, was not only his pet but also of the entire house. Miss Stockton is a charming little lady with an admirable stage presence and a way that won her many friends. In the part taken by Miss Stockton there is usually much exaggeration and features that jar, but she has eliminated all these and the part of Bossy in her hand is an original creation.

Herbina

Represents the bile more fluid and thus helps the blood to flow; it affords prompt relief from biliousness, indigestion, sick and nervous stomachs, and the over-indulgence in food and drink and drink. Herbina acts quickly, a dose after meals will bring the patient into a good condition in a few days.

G. L. Caldwell, Agt. M. K. and T. K. K., Checotah, Ind. Ter. writes, April 18, 1903: "I was sick and over two years with enlargement of the liver and spleen. The doctors did me no good, and I had given up all hope of being cured, when my doctor advised me to use Herbina. It has made me sound and well." 50c. Sold by R. C. Hardwick.

Death at Eddyville.

J. Lal James, one of the best known men in Lyon county, died Sunday evening at his home in Eddyville, from the infirmities of old age. The deceased was 78 years old. About three weeks ago his wife died and sorrow is supposed to have rushed his life to an end. His children are all grown. Bartley James, of Evansville, formerly of Paducah, was a brother. Mr. James at one time was a well known traveling salesman.

Stop That Cough!

When a cough, a tickling or irritation in the throat makes you feel uncomfortable, take Ballard's Horehound Syrup. Don't wait until the disease has gone beyond control. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Anderson, 34 West 5th St., Salt Lake City, Utah, writes: "We think Ballard's Horehound Syrup the best medicine for coughs and colds. We have used it for several years; it always gives immediate relief, is very pleasant and gives perfect satisfaction." 25c, 50c, $1.00. Sold by R. C. Hardwick.

Rheumatism.

When pains or irritation exist on any part of the body, the application of Ballard's Snow Liniment gives prompt relief. E. W. Sullivan, Prop. Sullivan House El Reno, O. T., writes, June 6, 1902: "I find pleasure in recommending Ballard's Snow Liniment to all who are afflicted with rheumatism. It is the only remedy I have found that gives immediate relief." 25c, 50c, $1.00. Sold by R. C. Hardwick.

SOME FACTS ABOUT INDIGO.

As Dye Producer the Plant Was for a Time Supplanted by Petroleum Product.

Modern science has so utilized one of the products of the coal fields as almost completely to put an end to the trading in two articles that once formed a very important part of the commerce of the United States. The best dye for blue was, of course, furnished by the indigo plant, and it is even now used for the very finest of fabrics, but the chemists and scientists were able to procure from the byproducts of petroleum an aniline dye which for almost all ordinary purposes has supplanted indigo. The natural indigo dye being pushed aside by the commercial dye, which is capable of being chemically prepared, has practically killed the growing of the indigo plant. Science, however, is bound to protect those who are dependent upon it for a livelihood, so that, when what seems to have been the destruction of one industry through scientific discovery has been accomplished, the chemists immediately produce some new methods that are of commercial advantage.

For instance, the native dyes in the east have discovered that when natural indigo and the commercially prepared dye are mixed in equal proportions, the result of the mixture gives a more valuable and a brighter dye than that which is afforded by the dye of the plant, so that, by reason of this discovery, what seemed to have been the inevitable ruin of the indigo culture has been averted. The discovery has greatly encouraged the growth of the indigo plant recently and has saved that article in commerce.

In noticing this recent discovery a writer upon scientific subjects has said that the advance of science has never been shown in a more typical fashion than when, diving into the history of modern chemistry, we discover that many products formerly regarded as being capable of formation by plants and animals alone have been successfully made in the laboratory of the chemists. The latter process is named in science "synthetic chemistry." The expression practically implies that compounds are built up by the chemist artificially. Synthesis is the opposite of analysis, the latter process being that of taking a product chemically to pieces, by way of ascertaining its new composition.

There will be no State fair this year and there should be none in the future under the same management until the debts of the last one are paid.

Our enterprising neighbor, the Fairview Review, knows a news item when it sees it. Its last issue was an unusually newsworthy and most creditable issue. Its front page was fairly teeming with good items, two columns of which had a very familiar sound to the Kentuckian's readers.

The 39th annual convention of the Kentucky Sunday School Association, meets at Henderson August 24, 25, 26. Fully 1,000 delegates are expected. A few Sunday School specialists always attend these State conventions, but this will be the first time in its history that as many as seven will attend.

Mr. Louis Landrum, president of the Kentucky Press Association, has announced his Executive Committee as follows: D. B. Wallace, of the Warsaw Independent, chairman; Lew B. Brown, Harrodsburg Democrat; W. C. Barrickman, Shelbyville Sentinel; Henry Lawrence, Cadiz Record, and William Henry Jones, Glasgow Republican. Clarence E. Woods, of the Richmond Climax, is selected as annual orator, whose position is a departure conceived by President Landrum.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and proscribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has now proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by Dr. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, P. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

New Orleans won the fight for the next encampment of the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias, defeating Nashville by a vote of 99 to 41. Nashville was sore over defeat, one of the Nashville papers offering this explanation:

"Some were unscharitable enough to declare that the increased mileage which would accrue to the Supreme Representatives by meeting in New Orleans was the lever that brought the votes to that city, nearly all of them traveling hundreds of miles further on passes or reduced rates, while being paid above the regular passenger rate by the supreme body."

In the election held at Mayfield Saturday, the local option side won over the saloon element by a vote of 533 to 267, making a majority of nearly two to one. The vote was the largest that has been polled in Mayfield in many years. The whistle of every mill and factory was put into operation Saturday night, which resulted in more noise than on New Year's eve. There has not been a saloon in Mayfield for thirty years.

September wheat went wild at Minneapolis and reached $1.23 Saturday. At Chicago reports of lower temperature in the northwest with continued sensational accounts of rust damage throughout the spring wheat section, caused a further wild advance. However, the rush from profit taking forced the cereal down amid some of the wildest scenes ever witnessed on the Chicago board of trade.

John M. Melan has become managing editor of the Paducah News Democrat, succeeding Irvin Cobb. Mack is one of the brightest newspaper men in the State and this change puts him in a position that will bring out the good points in him. He will make Urey Woodson just the kind of an assistant he needs in his Paducah office.

Eleven must be Godfrey Hunter's lucky number. In the 11th district 11 members of the district committee met and ignored Edwards' majority of 1100 and declared Hunter nominated by about 111 votes. His 11 however is not the kind that leaves the whole lump and the end is not yet.

Seebree business men inaugurated "a watermelon contest" last week, offering $15 in prizes for the best melons. There were 25 entries. Messrs. B. F. Jewell, W. L. Smith and T. K. Wilson were the tasting committee. The awards were made by number, after which the crowd was turned loose on the exhibits, which soon disappeared. J. M. Hall won first prize, W. F. Ashby second and Springfield & Beyner third.

BOY FOUND.

Robert Torian, Missing Kid, Located in the Country.

Robert Torian, the nine-year-old son of R. E. Torian, a commission merchant of 206 South Second street, was found Saturday night. The boy had been missing since Friday morning. He was located by his father on a farm several miles from Paducah.

Early Friday morning the lad was sent with some eggs for the Lagonarino hotel. He collected for them and left. When he did not return his father reported his disappearance at the police station. The city was searched but without result. Mr. Torian learned Saturday night of his son's whereabouts. He was returned home at once.—Paducah News-Democrat.

MR. J. S. WILLIAMS

Proprietor of Huffman's Mill, Victim of Bright's Disease.

Mr. J. S. Williams, the miller who for the last year or two has been operating Huffman's Mill, South of town, died Friday afternoon of Bright's disease of the kidneys. Mr. Williams came to this county from Ohio county, which county he formerly represented in the House of Representatives of the Kentucky General Assembly. He had made many friends by his upright dealings and gentlemanly bearing since he came to Christian county, and his death occasions general regret and sorrow. Mr. Williams was 59 years of age.

NOW CLARKSVILLE.

Two Out of Three Games Taken From Paducah.

Monday's Game a Fiercely Contested Struggle of Ten Innings.

Hopkinsville was defeated by Cairo three straight, one day sustaining a shut out with Morris in the box.

From Cairo the Browns went to Paducah and succeeded in taking two out of three games. On Friday, with Pettifer and Keller as battery, they shut out Paducah 4 to 0, playing an errorless game with six hits, while Paducah made 4 hits and 8 errors.

Saturday the Browns went to pieces, or rather the Paducah Indians struck a streak of batting luck and hit two pitchers unmercifully. Alexander was hit 7 times and knocked out of the box in the second inning. Ferrell came next and 9 hits were made off him. Paducah, after a shut out the day before, piled up 10 scores, while Hopkinsville with difficulty made 4. There were two errors.

Sunday there was an exciting game of ten innings with Morris in the box. It resulted Hopkinsville 7, Paducah 5, although Honno struck out 15 men. Hopkinsville made 10 hits and 4 errors and Paducah 9 hits and 4 errors.

The Browns came home Sunday night and left yesterday for three games at Clarksville and will play three more here beginning Thursday. This will be Clarksville's last appearance here and probably Friday a big delegation of Clarksville people will come over. One fare rates will obtain all this week, from either direction. Clarksville has just beat the champions two out of three and Hopkinsville will have to cut out errors if we get out of the series of six games with an even break.

Friday Cairo beat Clarksville 4 to 3. Saturday and Sunday Clarksville beat Cairo 7 to 2 and 6 to 4, played at Cairo.

Vincennes beat Henderson Friday 1 to 0. There was no game Saturday on account of rain. A double header was played at Vincennes Sunday. Vincennes took the first game 8 to 2 and Henderson the second, 2 to 1.

Vincennes at Paducah.

On The Fly.

A dispatch comes from Cairo to the effect that Pitcher Holycross, the heavy-hitting twirler for Cairo, has been sold to the New York Americans for $500. The money was paid Thursday at the close of the game with Hopkinsville, at Cairo.

Ralph Doll, with Clarksville, has succeeded Fleming as a pitcher for Evansville.

Cairo took three straight from the Browns, the last a shut out.

The league rules limit the payroll of each team to $800 a month. It is said Clarksville has increased its payroll to $1500. Cairo to $1200. Paducah $1200, Vincennes $1100. Henderson $950. Hopkinsville is the only team that is living up to the agreement.

Secretary Farnbaker has resigned and President Thompson is acting as secretary temporarily. He will be in this city today and it is understood that he will tender the position to a Hopkinsville man. The place pays $30 a month.

Hopkinsville has lost fourth place to Vincennes and the latter has a better chance to win from Clarksville. But anyhow we are ahead of Henderson.

The Paducah News-Democrat's new name for the Browns is Nut Students. Diagram, please.

Brady continues to get every fly that comes his way. Gilligan, Barlow and Marre led in hitting Saturday.

Paducah has put in a new catcher, a home youngster named Eddie Brabie.

Hopkinsville is trying to get Rogers, a pitcher who used to be with the team.

Gilligan and Alexander were both indisposed Sunday and on the bench. Moore played third, Brady short stop and Myers first base.

Bomar went to Clarksville yesterday to pitch the first game of a double series.

Feipho is playing first base for Clarksville and doing faultless work.

Left-fielder Harley, of Paducah, had his nose broken by a fly Saturday. The sun was in his eyes and blinded him. He will be laid up several days.

The official tables are being run wrong in all the papers of the league towns except Hopkinsville. President Thompson has agreed to furnish an official revision this week and see that they are put right.

Umpire Zinkins.

Umpire Zinkins is a good, conscientious umpire. He makes decisions that do not always please the fans, but he is in a better position to judge that they. He tries to umpire a game right, not to please anybody. Recently he became discouraged because of the "roast" of the fans, and wrote to league officials that he had tried to do right, and felt that from a standpoint of pleasing the patrons of the game, he felt that he had been a failure and wanted to resign. He was not allowed to, because the league officials recognized him as one of the best umpires possible to get. Pass should have some respect for the umpire. They should remember the sign in a western dancing hall: "Don't shoot the fiddler. He's doing his d—est."

STRIKE BEGUN

In Mines Of The United States Company at Sturgis.

Madisonville, Ky., Aug. 20.—A rather exciting report was received in this city last night when news was brought in that a strike had been inaugurated by the coal miners of the United States Mining Company, at Sturgis, Ky., in which one mine working two hundred men had closed down, and that if something was not done immediately to quell the trouble, men from the other mines would come out and join the strikers.

The trouble is over wages and "open shop" question.

Superintendent Bucher, of the mining company, is very angry over the matter and says he will endeavor to work non-union men exclusively as soon as he can make arrangements to get the men imported into the town.

Rain.

(BY MILTON WILLIAMS HALL.)

We welcome thee, oh Rain!

Glad to see thee once again;

Thy absence from our land

Has caused everything much pain.

The corn was parched,

The ground was baked,

And the grass was sear,

But thou their thirst hast slaked.

The grassy-brinked pond was dry,

The brook had ceased to flow,

But now the pond is filled

And the brook flows as before.

We thank thee, kind Providence,

That thou hast sent the rain,

To freshen our lands

And bring joy once again.

CUSTOMS OF THE HINDUS.

Carry the Heaviest Loads on their Heads and Squat Upon the Floor.

A famous traveling correspondent says that the people in the southern provinces of India do everything on the ground. They never use chairs or benches, but always squat upon the floor, and all their work is done upon the ground.

Carpenters have no benches, and if they place a board they place it on the earth before them and hold it fast with their feet. The blacksmith has his anvil on the floor; the goldsmith, the tailor and even the printer use the floor for benches, and it is the desk of the letter writer and the bookkeeper.

It looks queer to see a printer squatting before a case of type,
and even queerer to see a person writing letters with a block of paper spread out before him on the ground. But that is the Hindu custom.

You find it everywhere throughout India, just as you will find everybody, men, women and children, carrying loads, no matter how light or how heavy, upon their heads. If an errand boy is sent with a parcel he never touches it with his hands, but invariably carries it on the top of his turban.
The other morning, says a writer in Golden Days, I counted seven young chaps with "shining morning faces," on their way to school, every one of them with his books
and slates upon his head.

Mason's helpers, who are mostly women, carry bricks and mortar upon their heads instead of in hods
on their shoulders, and it is remarkable what heavy loads their spines will support.

At the railway stations all the luggage and freight is carried the same way. The necks and backs of the natives are developed at a very early age.

If a porter can get assistance to hoist it to the top of his head he will stagger along under any burden all right. I have seen eight men under a grand piano and two men under a big American roller top desk, and in Calcutta, where one of the street railway companies was extending its tracks, the workmen carried the rails upon their heads.

ATHLETICS IN GERMANY.

"Athlete" in That Country Is Interpreted as Strong Man or Weight-Lifter.

Wrestling is one of the most popular forms of athletic exercises in Germany, and it seems as if the heavy and muscular build of the Germans peculiarly adapted them for this kind of sport says C.
B. Fry's Magazine.

The general public interprets the word "athlete" as meaning a wrestler, weight-lifter or "strong man."
When the English style of athletics was introduced into Germany
it was termed "light athletics";
wrestling is termed "heavy athletics." In every town there are many clubs indulging in "heavy athletics," and numerous public concerns are arranged, in connection with which challenges to "all comers" are issued. Here one can often witness a pitched battle between science and brute power—
see an "all comer" of stupendous build, probably a butcher, brewer or furniture remover, laid flat on both shoulder blades in the most approved style by a little wiry fellow as slippery as an eel. On the occasion of the world's championship held in Berlin an open arena, roofed only in the center where the wrestling took place, was erected, with tiers of seats for the public all around. As luck would have it, the weather proved boisterous and the public shy of the fair; the championships ended dismally, and the impresario, unable to pay the men's retainers, very discreetly decided to "leave town."

MINNESOTA FISH STORY.

River So Jammed with Sturgeon that Boatmen Couldn't Row
Against Them.

E. F. Crawford, a prominent attorney throughout the northern half of the state, who practices at Bemidji, met with the most thrilling experience of his life, while coming up the Big Fork river in a canoe, says a Ripple (Minn.) correspondence in the St. Paul Dispatch. He saw the river filled from bank to bank with sturgeon,
the big lake fish that at this time of year ascend streams from Rainy river to lay their spawn in shallow waters. Not only was the sight appalling, but on several occasions his boat was in danger of being crushed by the countless monsters.

In company with two rivermen,
Mr. Crawford was paddling up river in great haste to reach Big Falls on the day of its being incorporated as a village, which matter was in his charge.

To reach the town, a canoe trip was necessary, as a log jam at the mouth of the river prevented steamboats from passing upward.
The river is full of rafts at various points, and some of them are so strong that their boat had to be carried over land along the banks.
They came suddenly upon a splashing surface, which extended across the river and several hundred yards ahead. Here the slope was gentle and no such conditions were present as to hint that rapids should form at this point. The men were in the center of the river, but at once began to paddle their boat shoreward to avoid the rapids. Suddenly one of the boatmen cried:

"My God! This is not rapids,
but a jam of fish!"

Mr. Crawford saw in startled amazement that they were, indeed, surrounded by big fish, some longer than a man. The sturgeon leaped and darted, showing the white gleam of their bellies, as they sprang along and churned
the waters with head and tail.
There were thousands of them,
traveling up stream in a wedge shape, with a leader at the head.
Except for a narrow streak on each side of the river, the fish made the river look like a bed of rapids. By striking with their paddles, the men managed to clear a path to the bank without their canoe being crushed by the sportive monsters. Then, by dragging their canoe cautiously along the bank for half an hour, they got ahead of this school, which was swimming at the rate of about three miles an hour up stream.
Later another school like the first was encountered, and still another, although smaller. After that Mr.
Crawford's party passed straggling bunches of five or six.

How Switchboards Are Packed.

The tests of electric switchboards packed in cases are thorough. A light marble switchboard, for example, enclosed in a leather case and then boxed with thick layers of excelsior, is attached to the chains of a crane and tumbled up and down on the floor. Sometimes it is attached to the end of a car and dragged along the ties in the yard. Recently, in an installation in Colorado mountains, material had to be hailed in wagons up to the plant.
On the way up the horses which were dragging some switchboards tumbled over a cliff and fell some 60 feet on the rocks below. The horses and driver were killed and the wagon was torn to pieces. Literally the only things unharmed were the brittle marble switchboards shipped from the east.—

Hot Meal Without Fire.

Readers of the war news will have noticed one or two references to the fact that timed meals for the Russian troops are prepared by a process which enables the contents of each tin to be served hot without a fire. This boon is secured by having the ordinary tins filled with food "jacketed" in patent tins. The patent tin contains water, together with a chemical mixture, by means of which the water can be raised to the boiling point in ten minutes or a quarter of an hour. All that is necessary to do when it is desired to heat the food is to puncture
the top of the patent tin, the chemical mixture being thereby forced into the water, which soon begins to boil.—London Truth.

HARMLESS SNAKES.

A cough is more dangerous than a snake, because there are some snakes that are harmless and there is no cough that is not dangerous. Yet the very people who kill any snake on sight, on the general principle that it might be deadly, let a cough alone on the theory that perhaps it won't kill them. Hundreds of thousands of men and women have paid with their lives for the neglect of a slight cough.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures coughs, bronchitis, weak and bleeding lungs and other diseases of the organs of respiration, which, if neglected or unskillfully treated, terminate fatally in consumption.

"I feel it my duty to give my testimonial
in behalf of your great medicine," writes
Mr. John T. Reed, of Jefferson, Jefferson
Co., Ark. "When I commenced taking Dr.
Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I was very low with a cough, and would at times spit up blood. I was not able to do any work at all, was weak and my head was dizzy. The first bottle I took did me so much good that I had faith in it and continued until I had taken twelve bottles.
Now I do not look like nor feel like the same man I was a year ago. People who astonished and said they did not think that I could live! I can thankfully say that I am entirely cured of a disease from which had it not been for your wonderful 'Discovery,' I would have died."

If you ask your dealer for "Golden Medical Discovery" because you have confidence in its cures, do not allow yourself to be switched off to a medicine claimed to be "just as good," but which you did not ask for and of which you know nothing. Judged by its cures there is no other medicine
"just as good" as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, for coughs weak lungs and other diseases of the organs of respiration.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. They do not beget the pill habit.

CONVERT WHO WAS USEFUL

It Took Muscle to Win Him, But He Respected a Man Who Could Fight.

Peace-lovers though we be, to us all there is virtue in skillful fist-fighting in a just cause. Therefore the thrill is at least pardonable which one feels on reading this episode which Dr. Rainsford relates in his book, "A Preacher's Story of His Work." The episode was in the midst of Dr. Rainsford's vigorous struggle on the East side of New York.

"I remember one man in particular—a big, strong fellow. He came in and sat down in the Sunday school. I had some of the very best teachers I could find, and I always put the best workers I had there. He began to talk in a way that a man should not talk to a lady. He was a little drunk. I saw the lady's face flush; I walked over and told him to get out. He would not move. I said:

"We are here to help you people; we are paid nothing for it. Now you are enough of a man to respect a lady. Why do you sit here and make it impossible for her to teach those boys?"

"He swore at me and would not get out.

"You don't want me to call a policeman, do you? Go out quietly."

"He jumped to his feet, and I saw I was in for a row. He was as big a man as I am. I did not call a policeman, but I hit him harder than I ever hit a man in my life, and knocked him down. Then I stood over him and said:

"Have you had enough?"

"He said, 'Yes.'"

"All right, I answered. 'Now get out.' And out he went."

"About three weeks after that we got into a scrimmage outside the Sunday school room with some toughs, and to my horror I saw, elbowing his way through the crowd, this same burly fellow, and I began to feel that between him and the others I should be killed when, to my astonishment, he walked up to the ring-leader and said:

"The doctor and me can clean out this saloon. You get out."

THE LAND OF FAMINES.

Farmers of India Have No Power to Plan or Provide for the Future.

Famines in India are not due together to failure of the crop in the famine regions. The country is inhabited by a race of agriculturists who seem to be unable to save anything, writes Rev. J. E. Scott in his book, "In Famine Land." Frugality and thrift are to them almost unknown. They have no power to plan for the future. If nature is propitious, they get a living; if the crop fails, they fall with it.

In Rajputana, at the time of famine, grain poured in from the northwest provinces and elsewhere in such quantities that railway companies and the merchants realized large profits, and wheat was on sale at a reasonable price; but as the poor peasant had no money he must starve to death with food at his door.

At many of the railway stations Mr. Scott saw thousands of fat pigeons gorging themselves with grain from the loaded wagons on the siding, while apathetic native officials stood by and saw the precious food devoured in the sight of scores of miserable famine-stricken villagers who cried aloud for food. So tame had the pigeons become that Mr. Scott had no difficulty in catching one, but he was immediately warned by a policeman that there was no "order" to molest them. The pigeons would have furnished enough food to keep a whole village from starving to death; but the high-caste Hindus would rather die of starvation than kill and eat one of them.

GOING TO ST. LOUIS

Judge Parker to Attend American Bar Association.

Esopus, N. Y., Aug. 18.—On account of the meeting of the American Bar Association at St. Louis September 26, Judge Parker will probably go to the exposition at that time, and not return to attend the New York day ceremonies, which will be held on October 4. It is not the plan now of Judge Parker to make any speeches on his way to St. Louis. Mrs. Parker will probably remain at the exposition two weeks. It is likely on Judge Parker's return he will address a political meeting at Indianapolis, Chicago and one or two other points.

A CASE OF IT.

Many More Like It in Hopkinsville.

The following case is but one of many similar occurring daily in Hopkinsville. It is very easy to verify its correctness. Surely you cannot ask for better proof than such conclusive evidence.

J. B. Graves, blacksmith, of 320 West 10th street, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills practically gave me a new back. For three or four years a kidney trouble had caused me the most constant and severe aches and pains through my back and compelled me to constantly complain in more than one way. When arising in the morning I felt sore and lame and had to make a great effort to dress myself. The trouble grew worse and a weakness of the kidneys set in which caused me a great deal of annoyance. Willing to try most anything I purchased Doan's Kidney Pills as soon as I saw them advertised locally and got a box at Thomas & Trahern's drug store and the trouble with the kidney secretions was much relieved. The experiment has given me a great deal of faith in Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.
Remember the name, Doan's, and take no other.

Entertaining Fiction.

One advantage of reading a serial story in a daily newspaper is that an installment of convenient length is received every day that does not consume an undue amount of the reader's time. An installment of a high grade serial story appears in every issue of The Chicago Record-Herald, a popular feature of that enterprising Chicago daily. Among the successful stories which have recently been enjoyed by Record-Herald readers are "Soldiers of Fortune," by Richard Harding Davis; "The Thrall of Lief the Lucky," by Otilie Liljencrantz; "Tristram of Blent," by Anthony Hope; "When Knighthood was in Flower," by Charles Major; "Alice of Old Vincennes," by Maurice Thompson, and "Graustark," by George B. McCutcheon. Every issue contains also a short illustrated "human interest" story on the editorial page. Readers of The Record-Herald can depend upon a never-failing source of pleasant entertainment in the noteworthy fiction that is always to be found in its columns.

RUN AWAY

Is Probably What Has Become

of Arthur White.

Told a Friend in July That He Intended to Go to Arkan.

SAs.

A representative of the Kentucky discovered an important clue to the probable whereabouts of Arthur White Friday afternoon, which was communicated to the boy's father and given out to the press correspondents. The boy who left his home Sunday, August 7, has in all likelihood gone to Eagle Mills, Ark.

About July 1st, he confided to a young friend named Lily Claxton, whom he met in this city, that he intended to leave home before long.

He said his father had in a very large crop of tobacco and that hard work was in prospect for him and that he could do better in Arkansas. A year or two ago a family named Minor from Casky, where the boy lived last year, went to Eagle Mills and one of them, Jim Minor, was back here about June and gave glowing accounts of the money that could be made working in lumber camps at $2 or $3 a day. Young White told Claxton what Minor had said and outlined his plan for getting to Eagle Mills. He said he would probably ride his wheel over towards Clarksville and sell it and get money to buy a ticket.

Eagle Mills is on the Cotton Belt Railroad in Southern Arkansas, about 230 miles southwest of Memphis. A ticket from Clarksville, a distance of about 430 miles, would cost about $13.00. White had a few dollars and he could have sold his bicycle and gone as far as his money would take him. He might have been supplied with money or a ticket on either the I. C. or the L. & N. roads.

Mr. White will make investigation along this line.

A close search was made north of town by a party of Mr. White's friends, but nothing was found to furnish a clue.

Rube Wilson was brought before Judge Fowler Friday afternoon and released for lack of evidence. The negro's stories were so conflicting that they appeared to be without any sort of foundation. The probability is that young White has gone towards Arkansas as far as his money would take him and that he will try to work his way by seeking employment from farmers along the road, until he can make enough to continue his journey.

FINE SHOWING

Made By Hopkinsville Uniform Rank in Parade.

One of the Uniform Rank cotillions which attracted favorable notice in the parade yesterday was Evergreen, No. 37, of Hopkinsville, Ky., of which Capt. Charles O. Prowse is commander. Although this company has not long been organized, its drill work and marching is equal to that of some of the veteran companies. The company is made up of the leading young men of Hopkinsville, and the creditable manner in which the members have conducted themselves during their stay in Louisville is a source of gratification to their friends.—Times.

The following members of the Hopkinsville company of the uniform rank of Knights of Pythias attended the conclave:

Lieut. E. W. Clark, Lieut. E. B. Courtney, O. M. Hill, H. L. Hayden, L. E. Fowler, T. F. Callard, E. J. Lawson, C. E. Harris, R. M. Tanks, C. H. Stowe, J. W. Stowe, C. W. Dorr, T. L. Payne, W. M. Terry, Geo. Connell, E. W. Jackson, Max Moayon, S. F. C. McCulloch, L. P. Atkinson.

Candidate for Judge.

Madisonville, Ky., Aug. 20.—A Democratic primary will be held in Hopkins county in October to name a Democratic candidate for county judge. Hon. R. B. Bradley is already an announced candidate, and it is generally understood that Squire W. E. Jago, of this city, will oppose him. Both are popular and a pretty fight is expected.

THIS WEEK'S SHOW.

Season Will Be Opened With a Diverting Novelty.

The most diverting novelty of the season will be "A Georgia Camp Meeting," one of those musical cocktails compounded to please the eye and ear of the amusement loving public. A Georgia Camp Meeting is really a musical comedy, different from all of the others, and is full of the very best sparkling and scintillating comedy, while the musical numbers, most of them original, are all those big affairs that have been the cause of the success of all the big musical productions. The company is made up of the very best colored talent and the chorus is much to a peer. There are, sandwiched in, a number of high class specialties which help, together with the other big features, to make A Georgia Camp Meeting the greatest of all colored attractions. At the opera house Aug. 24.

FATAL DOSE.

Of Morphine Swallowed By Myrtle Cunningham.

Myrtle Cunningham, an inmate of a house of ill repute near the cemetery, died Friday morning from an overdose of morphine, taken after a quarrel with a man. One theory is that she took too much of it to quiet nervousness, and another is that it was a case of suicide. The woman was about 20 years old and came from Heclar, in Hopkins county, to which place her body was taken.

Sam Jones Garnisheed.

As Rev. Sam P. Jones stepped from his carriage Thursday afternoon Deputy Sheriff Johnson served an order of attachment upon him. The order was signed by the Southern Lyceum bureau and was issued from the Jefferson county circuit court for $372.11. The reason for this was not known. When the papers were shown to Mr. Jones he glanced at them and passed on as if it were a matter of no importance. It is said that the alleged debt grew out of the failure of Mr. Jones to keep a date made by the bureau for him.

Those qualities of timelessness and general readability which characterize Everybody's are well to the fore in the September issue. A capital article on motor boats—the new, swift, high-powered pleasure craft—tells fully of these late toys of the millionaire class. The "Deepest Mine in the World" describes the wonderful copper mines of Michigan. In "The Campaign Spellbinder" Lindsay Denison describes the ways and methods of certain political orators and narrates many diverting stories. There are many diverting short stories, one in verse, by Wallace Irwin, besides the third installment of Hall Caine's serial, "The Prodigal Son," which is undoubtedly the big novel of the year.

CHARGE OF MURDER

Must Now Be Lodged Against Gip Griffin.

Henry Warner, the old farmer who was shot by Gip Griffin on June 22, near Fruit Hill, died Friday from his wounds. He was shot in the body with a shotgun, a second barrel took effect in his hip and then after clubbing the old man with the butt end of the gun, Griffin fled and made good his escape.

The shooting occurred in Warner's field, where he was at work, after they had had some words about a team, Griffin being a tenant on the farm.

Warner lingered in a suffering condition for two months, but his wounds refused to heal and finally caused his death.

There is a reward of $100 outstanding for Griffin's arrest. Warner was 65 years old.
